A MEDICAL SCHOOL SCANDAL VALUABLE APPARATUS MISSING FROM THE WOMEN'S LABORATORY.

s. Treer and Allen, Young Graduates, Arrested, but Blockarged—The Missing Goods Recovered Piecement or Mysteri-ously Returned—All Mouths Shut,

A little over a fortnight ago, when the faculty of the New York University Medical College were about to complete the fitting up of the new Loomis laboratory in East Twentysixth street, opposite Believue Hospital, th discovery was made that over $1,000 worth of surgical instruments and scientific apparatu pelonging to Prof. Loomis, after whom the new building is named, had been carried away from the Professor's rooms on the upper floor of the building. Prof. Loomis and the faculty were at a loss to account for the removal of the instruments, and the janitor was equally mystified. Prof. Loomie's son, Dr. Harry Loomis, finally went ce Captain Clinchy with the case, declaring that professional thieves must have stolen the property, since it wasn't possible that Prof. Loomis's students would meddle with his ap-able microscope was traced to Newark, siter some days of search, and then the remainder of the missing apparatus was returned in a lump to the Faculty in a mysterious way. The sender credited the return to Detective Wade.

A day or two ago the detective discovered that the leading culprits were two graduates of the class of 1887. Frof. Loomis was dumfounded when he heard it, and he and the Faculty decided that, inasmuch as the missing property had all been restored, they would retrain from prossecuting the two graduates, who have since gone into practice. The detectives were not free to adopt so generous a course, however, and they arrested Dr. Ferdinand Theer at his office at 35 charles street yesterday morning, and also a Dr. Alien, whose residence is withheld, and took them to the Fityseventh street Police Court. The prisoners were taken into Justice Weide's private room, and upon hearing the statement made that the college authorities refused to make a complaint, and upon hearing the statement made that the college authorities refused to make a complaint, the magistrate discharged the prisoners.

The two young dectors denied that they had had any guilty intent in carrying off the instruments. They said that while the new laboratory was in course of completion the valuable implements had been left kicking around in the dirt and rubbish, and were liable to be ruined, and so they took them away to care for them until the building was ready for occupancy. The college authorities refused to talk about the their yesterday, and they made the detectives promise to keep their mouths shut about it, too, and the detectives did.

A SMASH BACK OF MORELLI'S.

One Man Killed and Others and a Ludy Badly Burt by Falling Walls.

The side walls that supported the two upper floors at the rear of the four-story building 8 West Twenty-eighth street fell at 10% yesterday morning while several workmen under Foreman William Campbell were engaged in demolishing the structure. The east wall and the roof fell outward into the yard back of Morelli's restaurant. The west wall fell in upon the workmen on the third floor, and ur of them were caught in the wreck. Joseph Fagetchi, an Italian 22 years old, was instantly killed. The injured were John Keller, 1 Macdougal street, contusion of the back; John Philippo, 216 Spring street, lacerated wound of the scalp, and Bassi Niccoli, 67 Sullivan street, fracture of the skull.

Fagetchi's body was found wedged tightly in a hole in the third floor, where the falling mass had crushed through. It was necessary to remove a great pile of bricks and to cut away the broken timbers before the body could be released.

to remove a great pile of bricks and to cut away the broken timbers before the body could be released.

The wrecked structure was formerly occur pied by Morelli's restaurant and the Thirteen Club. Latterly it had been tenantless, and it is said the Building Department had condemned the rear walls. The owner, Robert Hoe, determined to remove the structure and erect in its place an apartment house for bachelors. The front wall and many of the partition walls had already been torn down, and the building was no more than a shell when it collapsed from the pressure of the roof on the unsound walls.

Eramus D. Garnsey, 231 East Twelfth street, had the contract for the work of demolition. He and his foreman, William Campbell, were arrested on a charge of homicide, and paroled by Coroner Eidman until to-day.

When the east wall fell part of it toppled over againstithe rear wall of No. 6, where Morelli now has his restaurant. The wine room, with its contents, was destroyed, and the kitchen and a large oriel window were filled with bricks and mortar. Francesco Lazzari, Morell's store-keeper, stepped from the kitchen into the dining room just in time to escape serious injury. He got a cut on the arm. Zaira Clani, an Italian woman of 22, was sitting at a rear window on the fourth fleor of Morelli's. A stone window ledge, part of the falling structure, crashed in upon her, striking her in the back. Mrs. Clani was in a delicate condition, and the shock brought on premature labor, she lay yeaterday in a very critical condition. Her husband, Victor Clani, is out of town.

The windows of the Thirteen Clinb, on the second floor of Morelli's, were broken by pieces of the falling wall, and a single brick lay in the middle of the floor as it it had been shied in by a passing gamin.

Sibley is a carpenter, and I do not know whether he is married to the woman or not. I never engaged her to be a housekeeper for me, or in any other capacity. I met this alleged Mrs. Sibley in New Haven, and was trapped by a gang to which she and her husband belong. They will not get one cent of the money they are after."

GUNNING FOR DOGS. Jersey City Police Take Bloody Vengeaner

Nearly all the dogs on the Henderson street extension, beyond the Morris Canal, in Jersey City, were shot by policemen from the First Precinct station house yesterday. The slaughter was brought about through the atack of four of the biggest dogs on Tommy Malone, a five-year-old youngster. The boy was playing in front of his home about 9 o'clock vesterday morning, when he saw a bundle of excelsior packing being blown about by the wind in front of a cabin known as "Laffin Jack's Castle," and occupied by Stephen W Treadwell, a well-known character in Jersey City, commonly called "Laffin Jack," his son Henry, and four big dogs. The boy ran after the packing, and caught it in front of Treadwell's gate. One of Treadwell's dogs dashed out after him, and was loined by a dog owned by Mrs. Pierce, who lives on a canal boat anchored near by, and by two other dogs belonging to Treadwell. Mrs. Pierce's dog, a big, black brute, caught the boy by the ear and pulled him down in the street. The three other dogs fastened their fangs in his thick woollen clothing and dragged him toward Treadwell's gate. The little fellow's cries attracted Thomas Scully, Patrick Biggen. Andrew Kelly, and Thomas Malone, who were working near by, and they rushed at the dogs with sticks as clubs. Mrs. Malone, the boy's mother, was before them, however, and, rushing among the infuriated brutes, she grabbed the boy and tried to pull him away. Mrs. Pierce's dog held on to the boy's ear, and it was nearly torn off. Another dog had a grip on the back of the boy's neck. Mrs. Malone screamed and tugged. A big bloodhound owned by Treadwell sprang half way across the street after her, but clore he could attack her he and the other dogs were driven off by the workmen. Treadwell had been quietly sawing wood about a hundred feet away while all this was going on. Mrs. Malone enough to say:

"It wa'k' my dogs as done it."

"You lie," shouted Mrs. Malone, and the four workmen and a crowd of about 100 people threatened to whip him. Treadwell stopped work and locked up his house and gate. Mrs. Malone took the boy to the Gregory street station house, where his wounds were dressed by Dr. Boyd. The injury to his ear is the most serious, but he is in no danger.

Roundsman Coward and Poicemen McBride and Duffy were sent to kill all the dogs they could ind on that street. Treadwell reinsed to allow them to see his dogs. While he was arguing. Mrs. Pierce's dog appeared in the cabin door of her canal beat. Officer McBride shot it through the head wiere it stood. Treadwell then gave Treadwell, a well-known character in Jersey City, commonly called "Laffin Jack," his son

"When Pittman was brought to the Tombs after his conviction on Thursday night last week," the Warden continued, "he was searched thoroughly by Keeper Aaron Young. I cautioned them to be careful, as I was alraid he would do away with hingsell."

"Was his cell scarched?" Coroner Eldman asked.

"The keeper who was on the second tier should have searched it. Pittman's wife and daughters saw him on Friday. Burke had no access to Pittman's cell after he was discharged. He and Pittman were cell mates for over two months. Burke hast visited Pittman on Marred 31, and on the day Pittman was sentenced. Burke called at the Tombs to see a prisoner named Green. Burke could easily have handed Pittman the poison if he had it. All visitors, however, are searched before being allowed to see a prisoner. The two Pittman gris visited their father, as I have said, during visiting hours on Friday, and they were thoroughly searched by Matron Stone. Mrs. Pittman came after visiting hours and was admitted after Matron Stone searched her. She went to Pittman's cell and kissed him. I watched her closely, then I went away, telling the night watchman to watch both of them closely.

"On the morning Pittman was found unconscious I sent for the prison doctor, and also to Chambers Street Hospital. Dr. Agan, after examining Fittman, told me that Pittman was suffering from nervous prostration. I did not let Ambulance Surgeon McKim take Pittman to the hospital until a deputy sheriff arrived, because I had no power to do so. brother Clarence on Eighth street. Ever since then he has been endeavoring to tarnish her name in order to prevent her from securing alimony. The other night, in a well-known resort at Bergen Point, he charged his brother with having been intimate with his wife, and produced an affidavit in which Clarence acknowledges his guilt. It is affirmed by Clarence that his brother got him drunk and compelled him to sign the document without his knowing its contents.

Wedneaday night George, with the aid of two friends from New York, turned his brother and lamily out of their own house, Clarence resisted, and George struck him over the hand with a bottle, inflicting a serious wound. The family took refuge with their friends, while the parties in possession of the house nailed the doors and windows fast. Simonson then went out, and, meeting his wife upon the streets, set upon her and beat her shamefully, making good his escane to the house. A warrant was issued by Justice Connolly Thursday morning, but the offender had left for parts unknown. All the parties are of a very respectable family and live in an aristocratic neighborhood.

It simply shows an ingenious desire to couple together a string of impossibilities that shall at once strike the hearer as peculiarly absurd. And yet more absurd and unreasonable things are daily occurring about us. The most senseless, idiotic, and unreason-
